FOR A BETTER URBAN FUTURE

THE URBAN YOUTH FUND

The Fund supports urban youth in developing countries. It aims to advance the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and the Habitat Agenda by providing small grants of upto USD 25,000 to youth-led projects piloting innovative approaches to employment, good governance, shelter and secure tenure.

By undertaking research on best practises in youth-led development, the fund also aims to create a greater awareness of the urgency to mainstream youth in development policies and strategies.

To qualify for a grant, applicant organizations must be led by young people aged 15-32, and the projects must and be based in cities or towns in developing countries. Support will be targeted to the young people who need assistance the most, particularly disadvantaged youth in urban slums. Projects promoting gender equality or involving partnerships with the government, the private sector or civil society are particularly encouraged.

YOUTH-LED DEVELOPMENT

Youth-led Development involves young people actively creating a better future for themselves and their communities. These initiatives are projects designed and implemented by young people aged 15-32 years. The projects often take place at the grassroots level and are largely carried out by youth volunteers. Initiatives address a broad range of community needs such as employment, access to affordable housing and secure land tenure, safer cities and participation in decision making.

Youth-led development gives young people valuable skills such as project management and teamwork, thus boosting their ability to acquire jobs and participate actively in society.

“I am regularly inspired by the good will, talent and idealism of the young people I meet across the world. They are making important contributions to our work to eradicate poverty, contain the spread disease, combat climate change and achieve the Millennium Development Goals.”

– The UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon’s message on International Youth Day 2010 .

UN-HABITAT AND YOUTH

Globally, 85 percent of the world's young people live in developing countries. An increasing number of these young people are growing up in cities. In many cities on the African continent, for instance, more than 70 per cent of inhabitants are under the age of 30. Young people, especially young girls and women, are the most vulnerable to social problems caused by unemployment and poverty. With more than 200 million youth living in poverty globally, there is a clear need to meaningfully engage and support youth.

UN-HABITAT recognises the role of young people in alleviating poverty and regards young people as a major force for a better world. The HABITAT Agenda commits governments and UN-HABITAT to work in partnership with youth and empower them to participate in decision-making in order to improve urban livelihoods and develop sustainable human settlements.

The UN-HABITAT Youth Fund was established at the request of member states at the UN-HABITAT Governing Council in April 2007 and officially launched at the 3rd World Urban Youth Forum in November 2008. The fund is currently supporting youth-led projects in more than 30 countries in Africa, Asia and Latin-America.

GLOBAL HELP DESK

The Global Youth Help Desk is a UN-HABITAT web based information hub that enables the accumulation of knowledge and research and promotes good practices in youth-led development among youth leaders and other actors interested in youth issues. The Help Desk will provide the users with self-learning modules, training materials, information on Urban Youth Fund projects, youth forum reports, Q and A's and personal stories from youth all over the world. The Help Desk is available at www.globalyouthdesk.org
